

Two Trees

Once upon a time there were two young ordinary purple and blue trees love and live with each other happily and they named Raka and Nayuth. Everyday they start their morning with a fresh new sunlight and a 1 000 carbondia oxide particles surrounded ready for the photosynthesis. They were a very good model trees. They made a shelter for other animals to live. They created a billion oxygen for animals and human. They produced food and many more thing that they helped and saved the environment. One day, there was a young boy named Krea. He saw Raka, a beautiful purple flower, fruit tree. He decided to dig her and put her in a big flower pot, in his garden. Bec of that, Raka was separate from Nayuth. That made Nayuth very angry and anxious with Krea. He decided to make himself handsome as Raka, so Krea would take him to his garden, too. Bec of that, Nayuth made himself grew more blue flowers, fruits and much higher than Raka. Until then, Krea saw Nayuth and digged him and put it in a big flower pot. Finally, Nayuth and Raka lived together joyfully and they made Krea's garden much beautiful than ever before.
